

4 sneaky storage pieces. Hey... Where did the mess go?

How do people with minimalist homes keep them tidy? Like, if you have hardly any furniture, where does the mess go? Don't worry - we're onto them. We know their secret: it's stealthy storage. And it wouldn't hurt to pinch some of their clutter-busting tricks for your home. It could save you valuable space and time. Especially if you use these four devious designs...

Exhibit 1: The storage bench

It's good to have extra seating. Somewhere you can take a load off for a few minutes, and if you have extra guests, somewhere you can seat them when there are no chairs left. But there's more to this comfy seat than meets the eye. Pull up that mystery tab and then you realise... Hey, wait a second! There's a load of stuff in here! Yes, it's actually a storage bench. So handy for putting away toys, bedding, towels and any clutter in seconds.

'The most fun thing to do in the bedroom is tidy up'. Said nobody ever. No, there are far more important things you could be doing - sleeping, for one. And to do that properly you need to relax. So it's important to keep the room clear of distracting mess.

If you're tight on space, there are only so many chests of drawers, bedside tables or shelving units you can have. But with a storage bed, you don't need to sacrifice floor space. You just lift up the mattress with the pull tab, and there's a whole bed's worth of storage ready to go. It's just the ticket for shoes, bedding, accessories, bags.... anything that might be awkward to keep in drawers or wardrobes.

Possibly the sneakiest of them all, and that's why it's the best. The storage sofa is so stealthy, no-one would ever guess its second identity as a storage unit. I mean, unless you owned one yourself, you wouldn't, would you? It just looks like a smart, stylish corner sofa. But like the storage bed and bench, once you lift up the tab of truth, you'll see what it can really do. It keeps extra cushions and throws, and gobbles up any living room mess. When you have an unexpected guest pop over last minute, you'll truly appreciate this bonus feature.

Exhibit 4: the storage box

Every sofa must have either a footrest, or a coffee table to accompany it. It's just the law - like beds and pillows, they must go together. But nobody said that a footrest couldn't be dual purpose... It could double up as a beautiful storage box, keeping your blanket, magazines, knitting needles... even those woolly socks you like to wear when Corrie's on.

You can use them to make very fetching bedside tables, too. Your current book, phone charger and tablet will be within reach but out of sight.
